"It is a beautifully conceived work that, despite its brevity, generates an expansive timelessness that conjures up the imposing landscapes of Sibelius. Dean's deft handling of a large orchestra is immediately appealing, yet the work has layers of structural and expressive complexity that beckon further hearing." (Bronwen Arthur, The Australian, 19 Jun 2000)

"Amphitheatre encompasses clarity and succinctness in its brief musical message... It was a lesson in substance." (Jeremy Vincent, The Australian, 11 May 2001)

"Beggars and Angels is at once an aggressive pictorial and ethereal journey, taking in a huge orchestral force. Played in one continuous breath, but with a decisive shift in mood midway through, the work delights in its expansive physical framework... [and] pushes its emotions in all directions." (Jeremy Vincent, The Australian, 08 Nov 1999)

"... an exciting soundscape that has a breadth of conception and a unified sense of structure that places Dean at the forefront of 21st century musical creativity." (Barbara Hebdon, Courier-Mail, 08 Nov 1999)

*"Dispersal is a powerful statement if ever there was one from a five-minute orchestral work.
Deriving its title from the mass slaughter and driving out of Aborigines from their homelands, it begins with a tremendous maelstrom of disconnected sounds – stabs, shocks and searing outbursts – which give way to reveal a shadowy, eerie hymn setting..." (Graham Strahle, The "Moments of Bliss [is] an orchestral suite drawn from an opera that Dean is writing based on Peter Carey's novel, Bliss. Introducing the work, (Markus) Stenz called it 'a true 21st-century piece', and in many ways it's an apt description, particularly in the use of sound effects and tape sequences. These ideas are hardly new in themselves, of course, but Dean manages to blend the electronic and the acoustic sounds in a fashion that makes previous attempts seem like a rehearsal for their real possibilities. He also backs it with some sensational instrumental writing, especially for bass and contrabass clarinet. I can't wait for the full opera." (Martin Ball, The Australian, 06 Dec 2004)

"This new score mirrors some Mahler characteristics: a huge orchestra, some extraordinary solos and unexpected instrumental combinations, a mixture of severely serious and popular music and an all embracing impression of sombre resignation. On its first outing, the work received a warm response; yet another substantial product from the MSO's active composer in residence." (Clive O'Connell, The Age, 04 Dec 2004)

"Dean's brilliant sense of humour comes to the fore in a suite of extracts from a forthcoming opera based on Peter Carey's novel Bliss... For this story of an Australian advertising executive who thinks he has died and gone to hell, Dean combines street noise, advertising jingles and air-conditioning hum in a hellist potpourri of modern life that climaxes in a convulsive orchestral heart attack. If Dean's vocal writing is half as expressive, he could be on course to produce the first great landmark opera of the 21st century." (Guardian, 18 June 2007)
