FOREWORD

To a wider public, Prokofieff will always be associated with Peter and the Wolf, Romeo and Juliet and the March from The Love for Three Oranges – which is, perhaps, as it should be; no twentieth-century composer has had a readier facility for finding the right melodic gesture or the right instrumental clothing to match the character or visual image in question. He pursued this genius down a fruitful path to his two miraculous collaborations with Russia's greatest film-maker, Sergei Eisenstein, and the gallery of more than sixty individuals who people his masterly operatic selection of scenes from Tolstoy's War and Peace. The 'basic lines' of development he set down in his 1940 autobiography – the classical, the modern, the motoric and the lyric – certainly helped him in his breadth of characterisation, and they are to be found, already fully fledged, in the early piano pieces he composed as a student at the St. Petersburg Conservatoire.

Yet there is another Prokofieff, a more profound musical thinker whose deeper qualities we are only beginning to appreciate. This new recognition comes in the aftermath of Soviet efforts to denounce his decadent Western products, and of Western critics' readiness to assess as mere communist propaganda the remarkable 'official' works he composed following his return to Russia in 1936. No doubt his sufferings under Stalin helped to shape the uncompromising arguments of the so-called 'war' sonatas for piano (Nos. 6-8) and Symphony No. 6, as well as the sublime simplicity of his last works; but there are disturbances, too, in portions of his early, Dostoevsky-based study in obsession The Gambler and the elaborately-scored cauldron of his 1920s opera The Fiery Angel. The latter work shares with the roughly-contemporary Symphony No. 2 a wealth of thematic material embedded in a consciously modern, age-of-steel framework. Following the apparent failure of such ventures, Prokofieff turned his back on density and complexity, but his conscious development of a new and noble strain of melodic writing – foreshadowed in the opening theme of Violin Concerto No. 1, and reaching its first full expression in his last ballet for Diaghilev, The Prodigal Son – was no compromise; if anything, it is his most original contribution to 20th century music.

He succeeded in every form – continuing the Mussorgskyan line of natural declamation in his operas and later songs, proving to be the natural heir to Tchaikovsky in ballet, turning his own pianistic virtuosity to powerful expressive purposes in the concertos and solo pieces, constantly refining his orchestral effects from the consciously noisy S c y t h i a n S u i t e through to the poignant and underrated S y m p h o n y N o. 7. His highly original attempts to write public cantatas for Stalin's era – unsuccessful at the time – and his deft incidental music for a series of abortive Pushkin projects, both facets of his output at last beginning to be acknowledged, give us a broader picture of his creative breadth. It is Shostakovich who has tended to be labelled as the chronicler of Soviet history, but Prokofieff, with his stronger gift for original melody and his wider-ranging use of the orchestra, may continue to surprise us the more.

PRÉFACE

Pour le grand public, Prokofieff sera toujours associé à Pierre et le Loup, Roméo et Juliette et la Marche de L'Amour des trois oranges, ce qui est peut-être légitime; aucun compositeur du vingtième siècle n'a fait preuve d'une plus grande facilité à trouver l'expression mélodique oule vêtement instrumental appropriés au personnage ou à la scène en question. Ce génie porta ses fruits dans les deux merveilleuses partitions qu'il ecrivit en collaboration avec le plus grand cinéaste russe, Sergei Eisenstein, et avec la bonne soixantaine d'individus qui peuplent ses magistrales scènes lyriques d'après Guerre et Paix de Tolstoï: Les 'lignes fondamentales' de développement qu'il décrit dans son autobiographie de 1940 – classique, moderne, motrice et lyrique – contribuèrent certainement à la diversité de ses caractérisations, et elles sont déjà toutes présentes dans ses premières pièces de piano, composées alors qu'il était étudiant au Conservatoire de Saint-Pétersbourg.

Il y a néanmoins un autre Prokofieff, un penseur musical plus pénétrant dont on commence seulement à apprécier la profondeur. Cette nouvelle considération fait suite a l'obstination des Soviétiques à taxer de décadence les œuvres de sa période occidentale, et à l'emprise des critiques occidentaux à considérer comme simple propagande communiste les remarquables œuvres 'officielles' qu'il composa après son retour en Russie en 1936. Sans aucun doute les épreuves qu'il endura sous Staline contribuèrent à modeler les arguments inflexibles de ses 'sonates de guerre' pour piano (nos 6, 7 et 8) et de la Sixième symphonie, ainsi que la simplicité sublime de ses dernières œuvres; mais le trouble est aussi présent dans certaines parties de son étude de l'obsession d'après Dostoïevski, Le Joueur, et dans le chaudron minutieusement orchestré de son opéra des années vingt, L'Ange de feu. Ce dernier a en commun avec la Deuxième symphonie pratiquement contemporaine, une profusion de matériaux thématiques enchassé dans un cadre consciemment moderne adapté à l'époque industrielle. A la suite de l'échec apparent de ces entreprises, Prokofieff abandonna densité et complexité, mais son développement conscient d'une nouvelle et sublime variété d'écriture mélodique – qu'annonçait le premier thème du Premier concerto pour violon, et qui atteint pour la première fois sa pleine expression dans L'Enfant prodigue, son dernier ballet pour Diaghilev – n'était en rien un compromis, il s'agirait là plutôt de sa contribution la plus originale à la musique du vingtième siècle.

Il réussit dans tous les genres – perpétuant dans ses opéras et ses dernières mélodies la déclamation naturelle imposée par Moussorgski, se reconnaissant comme étant l'héritier direct de Tchaïkovsky dans sa musique de ballet, utilisant sa propre virtuosité pianistique à des fins expressives efficaces dans ses concertos et pièces pour solistes, raffinant continuellement ses effets orchestraux, de la Suite scythe consciemment tumultueuse à la Septième symphonie poignante et méconnue. Deux aspects de son œuvre que l'on commence enfin à reconnaître – ses essais extrêmement originaux, et infructueux à l'époque, de cantates publiques pour l'ère stalinienne, et son ingénieuse musique de scène pour une série de projets avortés d'après Pouchkine – donnent une idée plus complète de l'ampleur de son talent créateur. C'est Chostakovitch que l'on a eu tendance à qualifier de chroniqueur de l'ère soviétique, mais c'est peut-être Prokofieff, avec son talent supérieur de mélodiste original et son utilisation plus variée de l'orchestre, qui continuera à nous surprendre davantage.

EINFÜHRUNG

Eine breite Öffentlichkeit wird bei Prokofieff immer an Peter und der Wolf, Romeo und Julia und den Marsch aus der Liebe zu den drei Orangen denken – und so soll es wohl auch sein; kein Komponist des zwanzigsten Jahrhunderts hatte wie er die Fähigkeit, mühelos die richtige melodische Geste bzw. die passende instrumentale Hülle für eine bestimmte Gestalt oder visuelle Vorstellung zu finden. Er folgte seinem Genius und beschritt den fruchtbaren Pfad, der zur zweimaligen gegückten Zusammenarbeit mit Sergei Eisenstein führte, Russlands bedeutendstem Filmemacher, sowie zu dem Aufgebot von mehr als sechzig Personen, die seine meisterhafte Opernauswahl von Szenen aus Tolstois Krieg und Frieden bevölkern. Die ‚Grundlinien‘ der Themenverarbeitung, die er in seiner Autobiographie von 1940 darlegt – die klassische, die modernistische, die motorische und die lyrische –, haben ihm, was die Bandbreite seiner Charakterisierung angeht, gewiss geholfen und sind voll ausgereift schon in den frühen Klavierstücken auszumachen, die er als Student am St. Petersburger Konservatorium komponiert hat.

Aber es gibt noch einen anderen Prokofieff, einen profunderen musikalischen Denker, dessen tiefergehende Vorzüge wir eben erst zu würdigen beginnen. Die neue Anerkennung stellt sich im Nachgang zu sowjetischen Bemühungen ein, seine dekadenten westlichen Schöpfungen anzuprangern, und zur Bereitschaft westlicher Kritiker, seine bemerkenswerten ‚offiziösen‘ Werke, die er nach 1936 im Anschluss an seine Rückkehr nach Russland komponierte, als bloße kommunistische Propaganda einzuschätzen. Zweifellos trug das, was Prokofijew unter Stalin erlitten hat, dazu bei, die entschiedene Argumentation der sogenannten ‚Kriegssonaten‘ für Klavier (Nr. 6-8) und der Sinfonie Nr. 6 ebenso zu prägen wie die erlesene Schlichtheit seiner letzten Werke; daneben finden sich aber auch Störungen, so in Teilen seiner frühen Studie zum Thema Sucht nach Dostojewskis Der Spieler und im kunstvoll instrumentierten Hexenkessel seiner Oper Der feurige Engel, die in den zwanziger Jahren entstand. Das letztgenannte Werk hat mit der etwa im gleichen Zeitraum komponierten Sinfonie Nr. 2 eine Fülle thematischen Materials gemeinsam, das in einen bewusst modernen, im Zeitalter des Stahls verankerten Rahmen eingebettet ist. Nach dem scheinbaren Fehlschlag seines Unterfangens verwarf Prokofieff Konzepte wie Dichte und Komplexität; seine bewusste Herausbildung einer neuen, hehren Form der Melodik – die sich im Eröffnungsthema des Violinkonzerts Nr. 1 ankündigt und in Der verlorene Sohn, seinem letzten Ballett für Diaghilew, erstmals voll zum Ausdruck kommt – war jedoch kein Kompromiss; eher könnte man sie als seinen originellsten Beitrag zur Musik des 20. Jahrhunderts bezeichnen.

Er versuchte sich mit Erfolg an jeder Form – er führte die Mussorgskische Linie der natürlichen Deklamation in seinen Opern und späten Liedern fort, erwies sich als natürlicher Erbe Tchaikovskys mit seinen Balletten, zog auf eindrucksvolle Art expressiven Nutzen aus seiner eigenen Virtuosität als Pianist in den Konzerten und Solostücken, verbesserte stetig seine Orchestereffekte, angefangen mit der bewusst lautstarken Skytischen Suite bis hin zur ergreifenden und unterbewerteten Sinfonie Nr. 7. Seine höchst einfallsreichen Versuche, öffentlichkeitswirksame Kantaten für die Stalin-Ära zu schreiben (denen seinerzeit kein Erfolg beschieden war) und seine gewandte Bühnenmusik für eine Reihe abgebrochener Puschkin-Projekte, zwei Facetten seines Schaffens, die derzeit endlich zur Kenntnis genommen werden, vermitteln uns ein umfassenderes Bild seiner kreativen Palette. Schostakowitsch wird leicht als Chronist der sowjetischen Geschichte abgestempelt; Prokofieff mit seiner ausgeprägteren Gabe für originelle Melodien und seinem weniger festgelegten Umgang mit dem Orchester ist dagegen zuzutrauen, dass er weiterhin mehr Überraschungen für uns bereithält.

BIOGRAPHY

- 1891 Born 11 April (23 April, New Calendar style) at Sontsovka in the Ukraine, a large country estate where his father works as a managing agronomist.
 - 1896 Encouraged by his mother's playing, writes his first piano piece Indian 'Galop'.
 - 1900 Sees Gounod's 'Faust' on his first visit to Moscow, and is inspired to compose his first opera, 'The Giant', performed before a select family audience.
 - 1902 Introduced through family connections to Taneyev in Moscow, who recommends theory studies with Pomerantsev and two summers' tuition at Sontsovka with Glière.
 - 1904 Meets Glazunov in St. Petersburg and is enrolled at the Conservatoire. Brings with him to his entrance examination four operas, two sonatas, a symphony and piano pieces.
 - 1905 The 1905 revolution disrupts classes at the Conservatoire and Prokofieff, although not an active sympathiser, signs one of the students' petitions protesting at the dismissal of the leading composer-directors.
 - 1906 Friendship with Miaskovsky, an already-distinguished student ten years Prokofieff's senior, compensates for dissatisfaction with Rimsky-Korsakov's over-crowded orchestration classes and study of counterpoint with the uninspiring Uadov.
 - 1908 Plays some of his first distinctive piano pieces, two from Op. 2 and the now-celebrated 'Suggestion diabolique' from Op. 4, to the leading lights of St. Petersburg's Contemporary Music Evenings and gives his first public performance in the series on 18 December.
 - 1909 His new compositions at the Spring examinations shock Liadov because of their Scriabin-esque tendencies. Begins graduate studies as a 'Free Artist' of the Conservatoire including conducting under Nikolai Tcherepnin, who encourages a taste for Haydn and Mozart.
 - 1910 Moscow debut with premiere of Piano Sonata No. 1. His father dies in July, which may account for the elegiac mood of the symphonic poem Autumn.
 - 1911 Piano Sonata No. 1 published by Jurgenson – Prokofieff's first work in print. Begins what he later regards as "my first more or less mature composition", the whimsical Piano Concerto No. 1, and a one-act opera based on a play with Wildean overtones, Maddalena; he is to orchestrate only the first of the four scenes.
 - 1912 Compositions include the utterly characteristic, motoric Toccata and the Piano Sonata No. 2. Premieres Piano Concerto No. 1 in Moscow, to a lively mixture of reactions.

BIOGRAPHY

- 1913 First performance of Piano Concerto No. 2, with its more consciously brilliant role for the soloist, at an open-air concert in Pavlovsk; it provokes an uproar among the largely conservative members of the audience.
- 1914 Graduates from the Conservatoire; the absence through illness of his authoritarian piano teacher, Anna Essipova, prompts him to perform his Piano Concerto No. 1 in the final competition for the Rubinstein Prize – which he wins despite Glazunov's opposition. Travels to London, where he sees the latest successes of Diaghilev's Ballets Russes and meets the impresario. Diaghilev commissions a ballet on a savage, prehistoric theme. Arriving back in Russia just before the outbreak of war, works on the ballet Ala et Lolly alongside the voice-and-piano fairy tale The Ugly Duckling and completion of the piano *Sarcasm*s.
- 1915 Travels to Italy to see Diaghilev, who rejects Ala et Lolly and commissions instead a 'truly Russian' folk tale (Chout or The Buffoon). Meets Stravinsky for the second time and joins him in a four-hand piano performance of Petrushka. Reworks material from Ala et Lolly as the Scythian Suite and begins The Gambler.
- 1916 Conducts the Scythian Suite in Petrograd; Glazunov walks out just before the end. Encouraged by the Mariinsky Theatre's new conductor Albert Coates and its most innovative and influential director, Vsevolod Meyerhold, spends most of the year composing The Gambler. A more lyrical style surfaces in some of the Visions fugitives, completed the following year, and the Op. 27 songs to poems by Anna Akhmatova.
- 1917 Witnesses the February Revolution in Petrograd, but spends much of the rest of the year away from the cities. Plans for production of The Gambler abandoned. A summer in the country yields two relatively untroubled works, the Classical Symphony and Violin Concerto No. 1. Composes, by way of contrast, the wild, 'Scythian' cantata Seven, they are Seven. Completes Piano Sonatas Nos. 3 and 4, based on sketches from the Conservatoire years.
- 1918 Gives two piano recitals and the premiere of the Classical Symphony in Petrograd before setting out for America in May, travelling via Japan and arriving in New York in September: Same success in recital there but concerts in December are abusively received by the critics. Meets Carolina Codina (Lina Llubera), his future wife.

BIOGRAPHY

- 1919 Greater success in Chicago. Cleofonte Campanini, music director of the Chicago Opera, expresses delight at the prospect of an opera based on a fable by his compatriot Gozzi, The Love for Three Oranges; a contract is signed in January, and despite the onslaught of scarlet fever and diphtheria in March, Prokofieff has the score ready by October. Campanini's death in December throws plans for the premiere into disarray. Meanwhile Prokofieff begins a more 'wild and passionate' opera, The Fiery Angel; it will take him seven years to complete.
- 1920 Visits Paris to discuss revisions of Chout with Diaghilev. Returns in October to America, where Chicago's wrangles over The Love for Three Oranges force another year's postponement.
- 1921 Diaghilev's planned presentation of Prokofieff to Parisian audiences through Chout is pre-empted by Koussevitzky's concert performance of the Scythian Suite; both are successful, though Chout's London premiere is coldly received. Begins work on Piano Concerto No. 3 in Brittany, dedicating it to the Russian poet Konstantin Balmont, who is staying nearby and five of whose poems he sets to music around the same time. The Love for Three Oranges successfully premiered at the end of the year in Chicago under Mary Garden's administration.
- 1922 After four years resident in America returns to Europe, settling in Ettal in the foot-hills of the Bavarian Alps, his base for the next year and a half.
- 1923 Concert engagements in five European countries. Marries Lina and moves to Paris, where the first performances of Violin Concerto No.1 and Piano Sonata No. 5 are indifferently received.
- 1924 Greater success in Paris with the more consciously modernistic Seven, they are Seven and revised version of Piano Concerto No. 2. Faced with the charge of "living off old compositions", begins to write a large symphony "of iron and steel" and earns money in the meantime through a commission to write a short circus ballet, Trapeze. First son, Sviatoslav, born in February, but Prokofieff's mother dies in December.
- 1925 Koussevitzky conducts the premiere of the "difficult" Symphony No. 2, but Paris no longer finds Prokofieff a sensation. Diaghilev, nonetheless, is intrigued enough to commission another new ballet presenting the new Soviet spirit of construction in a way that will suit modish Parisian tastes, Le pas d'acier. Returns to the United States for a concert tour beginning in December.
- 1926 The Love for Three Oranges successfully performed in Leningrad. Works on the complex orchestration of The Fiery Angel, with the prospect of a Berlin premiere to be conducted by Bruno Walter.

BIOGRAPHY

- 1927 First trip to the Soviet Union, giving recitals and appearances as soloist in Moscow, Leningrad and the Ukraine. At its June premiere, Le pas d'acier revives his flagging reputation in Paris. Berlin production of The Fiery Angel cancelled; Leningrad shows interest in The Gambler, which he revises.
- 1928 Portions of The Fiery Angel's second act conducted by Koussevitzky in Paris; Prokofiev reworks the thematic developments of the opera into Symphony No.3. Diaghilev commissions another ballet, The Prodigal Son, and is amazed when Prokofieff completes it in a few months. Second son, Oleg, born in December.
- 1929 Brussels, not Leningrad, hosts the first performance of The Gambler. The Prodigal Son opens in Paris after clashes with Balanchine, the choreographer; Diaghilev dies shortly afterwards in Venice. Revisits Moscow, this time without concert engagements; shape of things to come in the Proletarian Musicians' Union's rejection of the 'historically inaccurate' Pas d'acier.
- 1930 Extended USA concert tour. Works on two American commissions: String Quartet No. 1 for the Washington Library of Congress and Symphony No. 4, a reworking of themes from The Prodigal Son, for the 50th anniversary of the Boston Symphony Orchestra where Koussevitzky is now principal conductor. Composes a new ballet for the Paris Grand Opéra, On the Dnieper (Sur le Borysthène).
- 1931 Composes Piano Concerto No. 4 for Paul Wittgenstein, who has lost his right hand in the war, but the pianist rejects it outright. Concert appearances in most of the major European cities.
- 1932 Plays his new Piano Concerto No. 5 with Furtwängler and the Berlin Philharmonie, repeating his solo role in Moscow (November) and Leningrad (December), where Le pas d'acier is accepted in concert-suite form. Receives Belgoskino Commission to write his first film music, for Faintsimmer's Lieutenant Kijé. First performance of Sonata for Two Violins takes place in Paris, half an hour before the premiere of On the Dnieper.
- 1933 Though he tours America in January, Prokofieff spends most of the year in the Soviet Union, to hear the recording of his Kijé score and to work on a Shaw-Shakespeare compendium for the Moscow Kamerny Theatre, Egyptian Nights.
- 1934 Writes Izvestia article on a 'new simplicity' in melody and form which matches his aims in the West over the past few years. Spends five months in USSR, discussing Kirov plans for Romeo and Juliet towards the end of the year.
- 1935 Piano score of Romeo and Juliet completed in September, alongside his last non-Soviet commission, Violin Concerto No. 2, premiered by the French violinist Robert Soetens in Madrid.

BIOGRAPHY

- 1936 Moves his family to Moscow, but continues to tour in the west. Pravda attack on Shostakovich's Lady Macbeth of Mtsensk initiates tighter state control over new music. Many cancellations of theatrical works and films with non-Soviet literary subject matter, including Romeo and Juliet and three Pushkin centenary projects for which Prokofieff has written extensive incidental music – Romm's film of The Queen of Spades, Tairov's stage adaptation of Evgeni Onegin and Meyerhold's radical production of Boris Godunov. Only Peter and the Wolf, written spontaneously for Natalia Sats's Moscow Children's Musical Theatre, reaches performance.
- 1937 Conducts Suite No. 2 from Romeo and Juliet in Leningrad. The score of the riotous and inventive Cantata for the Twentieth Anniversary of the October Revolution, Prokofieff's second 'national' work after the Russian Overture of the previous year, provokes "more indignation than rapture" among the bureaucrats and remains unperformed until 1966.
- 1938 Final tour in the west; meets Walt Disney in Hollywood and is offered $ 2500 a week to write music for a film studio. Starts cinema work, but back in Russia collaborates with Sergei Eisenstein on the patriotic Alexander Nevsky. The premiere screening in December is a great success – not least with Stalin – though another first performance, of the austere Cello Concerto No. 1, fails and Romeo and Juliet receives an unremarked premiere in the Czech city of Brno.
- 1939 Music from Alexander Nevsky fashioned into a concert cantata alongside work on a new, 'Soviet' opera Semyon Kotko; Meyerhold, who is to direct the first production, is arrested for his outspokenness in July and executed in prison the following year; the oddly wistful melody that launches the short cantata Zdravitsa (A Musical Toast or Hail to Stalin) perhaps represents Prokofieff's sense of loss. Meets Mira Mendelson, who is to become his second wife, in the Caucasian town of Kislovodsk.
- 1940 The Kirov finally stages Romeo and Juliet. Semyon Kotko goes ahead at the Stanislavsky Opera Theatre; Serafima Birman (later to play the scheming Euphrosinia in Ivan the Terrible) takes Meyerhold's place as director, but the opera is not seen as a suitable 'example to the masses'. Escapes into the world of the Sheridan-based opera The Duenna (Betrothal in a Monastery).
- 1941 Sviatoslav Richter gives the first performance of Piano Sonata No. 6 in Moscow. Prokofieff finally leaves Lina for Mira. The German Invasion of Russia in June turns his thoughts from a new ballet, Cinderella, to an opera based on Tolstoy's War and Peace. Evacuated with Mira to Nalchik, where he composes String Quartet No. 2, on local Kabardanian Themes.

BIOGRAPHY

- 1942 Works on War and Peace and the whirlwind Piano Sonata No. 7 in Tbilisi. Travels to Alma-Ata in Central Asia to collaborate with Eisenstein on Ivan the Terrible, and completes scores for several minor patriotic films.
- 1943 Six weeks in Moscow followed by four months back in Alma-Ata. Receives his first Stalin Prize for Piano Sonata No. 7, triumphantly premiered by Richter in January. Piano score of Cinderella and Flute Sonata completed in Perm. Back in Moscow by October.
- 1944 Concentrates on two major projects completed during summer in the country, at Ivanovo: Piano Sonata No. 8, premiered at the end of the year by Emil Gilels, and Symphony No. 5. First public hearing of the original eleven-scene version of War and Peace in October is moderately successful, though stagings are postponed and the event is soon eclipsed by the screening of Ivan the Terrible part one, for which Prokofieff and Eisenstein both receive class one Stalin Prizes.
- 1945 Moscow premiere of Symphony No. 5, Prokofieff's last appearance as conductor, coincides with the impending defeat of the Germans. Several days later, suffers concussion of the brain after a fall and never recovers his health. Able to work on music for Ivan the Terrible part two and revisions to War and Peace in the autumn, and celebrates victory with the bizarrely-scored Ode to the End of the War. Cinderella's Bolshoi premiere takes place in November.
- 1946 Triumphant Leningrad stagings of the revised first part of War and Peace at the Maly Theatre, conducted by its champion Samosud, and of The Duchenya at the Kirov Theatre. Prokofieff and Mira purchase a dacha in Nikolina Gora, where he spends most of his time. Composes the spare, tragic Violin Sonata No. 1 and works on his bleak orchestral masterpiece, Symphony No. 6. Ivan the Terrible part two criticised for 'historical inaccuracies' and banned.
- 1947 The second ('War') half of War and Peace reaches dress rehearsal in Leningrad, only to be withdrawn following official criticism and Prokofieff's refusal to cut offending scenes. Composes two introspective works at Nikolina Gora, the disarmingly simple Piano Sonata No. 9 and the Sonata for Solo Violin. Radically expands Symphony No. 4 along the lines of its successor. Mravinsky conducts Symphony No. 6 which is hailed at its October premiere, but publicly denounced and withdrawn shortly afterwards.

BIOGRAPHY

- 1948 Prokofieff's official marriage to Mira leaves Lina, as a resident alien, unprotected; she is arrested on trumped-up charges and deported to a Siberian labour camp. Andrei Zhdanov, Stalin's right-hand man, denounces 'formalism in music' at a February conference. Prokofieff is powerless; his works are unperformed over the following months and even his ideologically correct new opera, The Story of a Real Man, is ferociously denounced at the end of the year.
- 1949 A new full-length ballet score, The Tale of the Stone Flower, is deemed unacceptable and a Bolshoi production postponed. Prokofieff finds some consolation in his musical friendship with the young Mstislav Rostropovich, for whom he composes a Cello Sonata.
- 1950 Attends his last premiere, the first public performance of the Cello Sonata in March, Prokofieff works slowly on the oratorio On Guard for Peace and the suite for children Winter Bonfire. Concert-hall rehabilitation for his works begins.
- 1951 Richter gives the first performance of Piano Sonata No. 9 shortly before Prokofieff's sixtieth birthday, relayed by telephone to the composer from the Union of Composers. Rostropovich collaborates with him on the transformation of Cello Concerto No. 1 into what will eventually become the very different Sinfonia-Concertante.
- 1952 Completion of the Sinfonia-Concertante and the enigmatic, only superficially simple Symphony No. 7, conducted by Samosud in October; Prokofieff makes his last concert-hall appearance. Makes sketches for the Cello Concertino, revises Piano Sonata No. 5 and plans a revision of Symphony No. 2.
- 1953 Writes his childhood autobiography and hears news of Bolshoi rehearsals for The Stone Flower. Plans a series of new works and composes up until his death on 5 March, only hours before that of Stalin.

First performance (version for two pianos): 4 February 1927, Moscow

Serge Prokofieff – Samuil Feinberg

American concert promoters asked Prokofieff to include works of the Classical era in his piano recitals. It seems that Igor Stravinsky suggested to Prokofieff that he search through Schubert's Ländlers and Waltzes for such material. In 1920 Prokofieff assembled a number of Waltzes into a suite with several of them serving as a sort of refrain. The mood is throughout light and the original musical texture and harmonies remained almost untouched. In 1923 the composer created a version for two pianos for Boris Romanov's dance company 'The Russian Romantic Theatre' for a production called 'Hommage à Schubert' in which he enriched the harmonic structure and introduced additional contrapunctal details.

The Russian Romantic Theatre – Boris Romanov (choreographer)

The première of Trapèze in Gotha was followed by only a few performances in Hanover and Turin – together with Romanov's other commission, 'Hommage à Schubert', for which Prokofieff made an arrangement for two pianos of his suite Waltzes for piano solo (1920). However, in spring 1926 'The Russian Romantic Theatre' went bankrupt, the company was disbanded, the score disappeared and Trapèze fell into oblivion. Prokofieff, who had – apparently from the very start – conceived the music of Trapèze also for concert performances, transferred sections 3 to 8 into his Quintet, Op. 39 (1924). 'Overture' and 'Matelote' were reworked for full orchestra and became the first and third movements of Divertissement, Op. 43 (1925–1929). In 2002 Noëlle Mann, curator of the Serge Prokofieff Archive, re-discovered the piano score of 'Overture' and 'Matelote' which then served Samuel Becker as a basis for the reconstruction of their original setting for oboe, clarinet, violin, viola and double bass. Thus in combination with the music from Op. 39 it was possible to re-establish the whole ballet in its original structure. A concert performance of the complete ballet by members of the Royal Northern College of Music conducted by Robin Newton took place in January 2003. On 8 April 2003, nearly eighty years after its première, Trapèze was performed again on stage by the English National Ballet at the Sadlers Wells Theatre. Choreographed by Christopher Hampson Sarah McIlroy, Jan-Erik Wikström, Amy Hollins, Francisco Bosch, Joanne Clarke and Laura Tong danced accompanied by the English National Ballet Orchestra under the baton of Anthony Twiner.

Symphony No. 3 is based on music from the opera The Fiery Angel, Op. 37 (1919-1927) which remained unstaged until 1955, four years after Prokofiev's death. After having attended a concert performance of act II of The Fiery Angel under the baton of Serge Koussevitzky in June 1928 the composer decided to adapt parts of Op. 37 for his Third Symphony. The same fate shared the ballet The Prodigal Son, Op. 46 whose musical material functioned as basis for Symphony No. 4, Op. 47.

ARRANGEMENTS: for piano four hands by Nikolai Myaskovsky ■ for two pianos eight hands by Pavel Lamm.

Konstantin Sergeev (Romeo) – Galina Ulanova (Juliet) – Robert Gerbek (Tybalt) – Andrei Lopukhov (Mercutio) – K. Zhuravlev (Father Lorenzo) – Evgenia Biber (Juliet's Nurse) – Boris Shavrov (Paris) – Leonid Lavronsky (choreographer) – Pyotr Vilyams (stage designer) – Isai Sherman (conductor)

Six years later, on 22 December 1946, followed the Moscow première of Op. 64 at the Bolshoi Theatre. On this occasion it was called 'Ballet in 3 acts with epilogue' starring Galina Ulanova again as Juliet with Mikhail Gabovich (Romeo), Alexei Ermolaev (Tybald) and Sergei Koren (Mercutio). The Bolshoi Theatre Orchestra was heard under the baton of Yuri Faier. Pyotr Viliams was again responsible for the stage design.

Natalia Sats, director of the Moscow Central Theatre for Children, started the scheme for the composition of Peter and the Wolf which was conceived as an introductory guide for children to the instruments of a symphonic orchestra. According to the composer's idea the characters of the story are represented by certain instruments playing specific musical motifs: Bird = flute · Duck = oboe · Cat = clarinet · Grandfather = bassoon · Wolf = three horns · Peter = violin · Hunters = timpani.

The film with a scenario after Pushkin’s novel by Mikhail Romm never came into realization. Prokofieff recycled music from Op. 70 in his Sonata for Piano No. 8, Op. 84 (‘Andante’) and in Symphony No. 5, Op. 100 (‘Adagio’). The manuscript piano score and unfinished score are preserved at the State Archives of Literature and Art. Scenes 8 (bars 22-35), 18 (bars 94-154), 20 (bars 19-34, 48-55), 21 and 24 were orchestrated by Mikhail Yurovsky.

In 1936 director Alexander Tairov asked Prokofieff to compose music for a dramatized version of 'Evgeni Onegin' by Sigizmund Krzhizhanovsky at the Moscow Chamber Theatre for the forthcoming centennial celebrations of Alexander Pushkin's death in 1937. According to Elizaveta Dattel the piano score (with indications for the instrumentation) was completed with the exception of the last four numbers and the students' choral songs in Autumn 1936. Last sketches for the decoration and the costumes were completed by Alexander Osmerkin.

EVGENI ONEGIN, Op. 71 [CONTINUED II]

But then, presumably due to artistic liberties not approved by the Stalinist authorities and/or possible artistic differences between Krzhizhanovsky and Tairov, the Committee for Artistic Matters [Комитет по делам искусств · Komitet po delam iskusstv] gave the order to remove the Evgeni Onegin project from the repertory of the Moscow Chamber Theatre. In 1973 Sovetsky Kompozitor, Moscow, published a full score of Op. 71 which was accomplished by Elizaveta Dattel (although she is only mentioned as 'editor') on the basis of the composer's indications in the piano score. Musical material from Op. 71 was recycled in Betrothal in a Monastery, Op. 86, in Cinderella, Op. 87, in War and Peace, Op. 91, in the Sonata for Piano No. 8, Op. 84, and in the Symphony No. 7, Op. 131. The author of the lines in Nos. 4 and 13 ('Elle était fille, elle était amoureuse ...') is Jacques Clinchamps de Malfilâtre (1732-1767). The autograph of the piano score is preserved at the State Archives of Literature and Art. Sir Edward Downes discovered the piano reduction of scenes 38, 39, 40 which had been considered to be lost for a long time. He orchestrated the pieces and conducted the première of the complete work at the BBC on 4 April 1980.

ARRANGEMENTS: There is an abridged version by Gerd Albrecht on the basis of Elizaveta Dattel's orchestration, 'Eugen Onegin. Szenen für fünf Schauspieler(innen), gem. Chor und Orchester' (2[picc].2[cor anglais].2[bass clar, alto sax, tenor sax].1 – 2.baritone.2.2.1 – timp. perc [tamb, side dr, bass dr, cym]. harp. 2 hpd. strings), with German Text provided by Jörg Morgener ■ as 'Scenes from Eugene Onegin' (1992) by Edward Downes for five speakers, choir and orchestra – 2.2.2[alto sax, tenor sax].1 – 2.2.baritone trpt.2.1 – timp. perc. harp. 2 pianos. strings) ■ Gennadi Rozhdestvensky compiled an orchestral suite called 'Pushkiniana' based on material from Opp. 70, 70a and 71 (2.3[cor anglais].3[bass clar].2sax[alto, baritone].2 – 4.2.3.1 – timp. perc [tamb, side dr, bass dr, cym]. harp. hpd. piano. strings ['Pique Dame', Op. 70: 'Herman', 'Liza', 'The Ball (Polonaise)' · 'Evgeni Onegin', Op. 71: 'The Ball at the Larin's' ('Minuet', 'Polka' · 'Mazurka' · 'Boris Godunuv', Op. 70a: 'Polonaise (Fountain Scene)'] ■ for two pianos by Segei Babayan ('Mazurka' · 'Polka') ■ for piano ('Suite from Evgeni Onegin') by Zinaida Vitkind ('Onegin' · 'Lenski' · 'The Ball at the Larins' [Waltz, Polka, Minuet, Mazurka] · 'Petersburg Soirée' · 'Onegin's Letter to Tatyana' · 'Remembrance of the Waltz') after the German assault on the Soviet Union. For many years the score of the film music was untraceable. When Sikorski Music Publishers were provided copies of Prokofieff's manuscript by the Glinka Museum, Frank Strobel was able to make a reconstruction of the original music in 2003. The above listed details concerning the orchestration correspond to the reconstructed version which is subdivided into 27 segments. For further information see the score's foreword. Strobel's version was heard for the first time on 16 October 2003 in Berlin, Konzerthaus, during a showing of Eisenstein's masterpiece with Marina Domashenko (mezzo-soprano), the Ernst-Senff-Choir and the Rundfunk-Sinfonieorchester Berlin under the baton of Frank Strobel. There is also a version by William D. Brohn who combined music reconstructed from the soundtrack, pieces of the Cantata Alexander Nevsky, Op. 78, and music composed by himself in Prokofieff's style. This arrangement was recorded in 1993 with Evgenia Gorokhovskaya (mezzo-soprano) and the St. Petersburg Philharmonic Orchestra under the baton of Yuri Temirkanov.

CHRONOLOGICAL LIST OF WORKS

LERMONTOV [without opus number] unfinished

1941

Music to the film for orchestra

[Лермонтов. Музыка к кинофильму – Lermontov. Muzyka k kinofilmu]

Produced by Soyuzdetfilm [All-Union Children's Film Studios] – Konstantin Paustovsky (scenario) – Albert Gendelstein (director) – Konstantin Efimov (set design and costumes) – Mark Magidson, Alexander Shelenkov (camera men) – Sergei Yurtsev (sound engineer)

1. Fragment from Fenel
2. Quadril
3. Trio from a Waltz
4. Waltz
5. Polonaise
6. Song 'Little Path' [Путь дороженка]
7. Waltz 'Youth'
8. Trio from Mephisto Waltz

CAST: Lermontov (Alexei Konsovsky) – Princess (Nina Shaternikova) – Belinsky (Andrei Raevsky) – Odoevsky (Pavel Shpringfeld) – Vasilchikov (Georgi Menglet) – Martynov (Pavel Masalsky) – Baron de Barait / Stepan Stepanovich (Sergei Martinson) – Tsar Nikolai I (Alexei Savostyanov) – Grand Duchesse (Lidiya Sukharevskaya) – Benkendorf (Nikolai Komissarov) – General Golofev (Boris Tenin) – Smirdin (Mikhail Troyanovsky) – Stolshin (Andrei Fait)

During the labour on Lermontov Gendelstein and Prokofieff had numerous disagreements with the result that Prokofieff withdrew from the production and Venedikt Pushkov was charged with the completion of the score. From the eight items that Prokofieff had written before abandoning the project especially 'Mephisto Waltz' and the 'Polonaise' became quite popular. While 'Notograficheski Spravochnik' by Semyon Shlifstein (Sovetsky Kompozitor, 1962) gives 1941 as the date of creation of Lermontov, the title sequence of the film mentions 1943. See ▶ Three Pieces, Op. 96. The manuscript piano score is preserved at the State Archives of Literature and Art.

IVAN THE TERRIBLE, Op. 116 [CONTINUED II]

Overture, Op. 72, Symphony No. 3, Op. 44 and 'Field of the Dead' from the Cantata Alexander Nevsky, Op. 78.) ■ In 1961 Abram Stasevich compiled an oratorio for narrator, contralto, baritone, mixed choir, children's choir (ad lib.) and orchestra after Ivan the Terrible, Op. 116 on words by Sergei Eisenstein with insertions by Abram Stasevich, German version by Jörg Morgener (3[2picc].3[cor anglais].5[Eb clar, bass clar].2sax[alto/baritone].4[db bn] – 4.5.3.2 – timp. perc [tgl, whip, wood bl, tamb, side dr, bass dr, cym, tam-t, church bells, glsp, xyl, metal bar]. 2 gusli, 2 harps. piano. strings ['Overture' · 'Young Ivan's March' · 'The Ocean' · 'I Will Become Tsar' · 'Song of Praise' · 'May He Live Forever' · 'The Simpleton' · 'The Swan' · 'From the Enemies' Tombs' · 'The Tatars' · 'The Cannoneers' · 'The Assault of Kazan' · 'Ivan Implores the Boyars' · 'Ephrosinia's Lullaby' · 'Ivan at Anastasia's Coffin' · 'The Oath of the Oprichniki' · 'Fyodor Basmanov's Song with the Oprichniki' · 'Dance of the Oprichniki' · 'Finale']) ■ In the same year (1961) also Levon Atovmyan completed an oratorio for contralto, baritone, choir and orchestra, 'Ivan the Terrible', on the basis of Op. 116. Tel Aviv musicologist Nelly Kravets, who received the score from Atovmyan's daughter Svetlana in 2007, states that Atovmyan's version ('Ivan and the Boyars' · 'Ivan Entreats the Boyars' · 'The Barver's Song' · 'The Oprichniks' · 'The Swann' · 'Anastasya' · 'The Ocean' · 'The Fall of Kazan' · 'Glorification' – 4[2picc].3[cor anglais].4[Eb clar bass clar].tenor sax.3[db bn] – 4.5.3.2 – timp [2].perc [tgl, whip, wood bl, tamb, side dr, bass dr, cym, Tam-t, glsp, xyl]. 2 harps. cel. piano. strings) which spares textual insertions (duration: approx. 30 minutes), is probably closer to Prokofieff's intentions than the work of Abram Stasevich. The composer approved of Atovmyan's conception as early as 1947 ■ Composer Mikhail Chulaki and choreographer Yuri Grigorovich used Prokofieff's film score for a ballet entitled 'Ivan the Terrible', which was premiered in 1975 ■ In 1990 Christopher Palmer arranged a Concert Scenario 'Ivan the Terrible' for contralto, bass, mixed choir and orchestra (3[picc].3[cor anglais].5[Eb-clar, bass clar].3sax[alto, tenor, bass].4[db bn] – 4.5.3.2 – timp. perc [tgl, whip, tamb, tenor dr, side dr, bass dr, cym, tam-t, bells, xyl]. 2 harps. piano. strings) with a Russian text by Vladimir Lugovsky ■ In 2016 Frank Strobel produced a reconstruction of the film music matching the final cut of the picture (first performance: 16 September 2016, Berlin, Rundfunk-Sinfonieorchester Berlin under the baton of Frank Strobel) – in contrast the material prepared by Sikorski Music Publishers represents a scientific research concerning all of what Prokofieff ever composed for Ivan the Terrible not considering that noticeable portions of the music underwent cuttings and reorganizations due to adjustments on the actual composition of the film sequences.

The currently available version of War and Peace corresponds to the score published by Muzyka, the State Music Publishers, in 1958. Originally the composer finished the opera as early as 1942. Due to Soviet ideological and aesthetic pressure in the context of the German invasion Prokofieff revised the opera several times between 1942 and 1952. In the course of this process War and Peace was transformed from a rather intimate opera with the love story of Natasha, Andrei and Pierre in its centre into a heroic national monument. Patriotic mass choruses, heroic arias and conventional ball music were added to make the Russian folk and the legendary general Kutuzov the main heroes of the story. The rather 20th-century-sounding music of the original score became more nineteenth-century like. War and Peace grew from 11 scenes to 13 scenes with Epigraph and was finally split into two parts performed on two evenings. However, Prokofieff's above mentioned first version of the opera – which represents the composer's original uncensored conception of the work – is preserved in piano score in the Russian State Archive of Literature and Art and the Glinka National Museum Consortium of Musical Culture. Since the orchestration was not finished when revisions started a number of parts of this version remained unscored. Rita McAllister orchestrated these sections and assembled a performing edition of the first version of War and Peace jointly with Katya Ermolaeva. Its first performance as a joint production of the Royal Conservatoire of Scotland, the Rostov State Conservatoire and Scottish Opera took place in Glasgow and Edinburgh in January 2010 and was followed by a first Russian performance in Rostov-on-Don in March 2010.

According to the composer the Epigraph can be performed instead of the overture or before Scene VIII. Scene XIII, as listed above, represents a somewhat shortened version – whereas the Finale, from ‘Allegro fastoso’ on, comprises 117 bars, the original concept spanned 152 bars. ARRANGEMENTS: Symphonic Suite by Christopher Palmer (‘The Ball’ [Fanfare, Polonaise, Waltz, Mazurka] • ‘Intermezzo’ [May Night] • ‘Finale’ [Snowstorm, Battle, Victory], 3[picc].3[cor anglais].3[bass clar].3[db bn] – 4.3.3.1 – timp 4-5 perc. 2 harps. organ [ad lib.]. strings) ■ for two pianos by Segei Babayan (‘Natasha’s and Andrei’s Waltz’) ■ for piano (waltz from Scene II).

Mstislav Rostropovich (violoncello) – Moscow Philharmonic Orchestra – Abram Stasevich (conductor)

After the composer's death Mstislav Rostropovich completed piano score and solo part. This applies especially for the only sketched final movement whose tonal plan and musical development had been indicated to Rostropovich by Prokofieff. Preceding the première of Op. 132 with Dmitri Kabalevsky's orchestration in 1960, the Concertino was performed for the first time on 29 December 1956 in the Small Hall of the Moscow Conservatory by Mstislav Rostropovich accompanied by pianist Alexander Dedyukhin. ARRANGEMENTS: for five violoncello by Mstislav Rostropovich (second movement) ■ for violoncello and chamber orchestra (2[picc]-2[cor anglais].2[bass clar].2 – 2.1.0.0 – timp. 2 perc [tgl, tamb, side dr, bass dr, glsp]. piano [ad lib.]. strings) by Vladimir Blok (1996).

CHRONOLOGICAL LIST OF WORKS

CONCERTO FOR TWO PIANOS AND STRINGS, Op. 133 sketches 1952

[Концерт для двух фортепиано и струнного оркестра, Соч. 133 · Kontsert dlya dvukh fortepiano i strunnogo orkestra, Soch. 133]

The sketches comprise 24 pages from which nos. 19 and 20 were written by Anatoli Vedernikov under Prokofieff's instruction. Op. 133 was conceived as a three-movement composition. There is a completion by Boris Tikhomirov from 2003, whose first movement does not bear any tempo indication, the second is headed 'Andante tranquillo · Tranquillo', and its third movement, an 'Allegretto' with music solely by Tikhomirov, represents a fantasy on a theme by Prokofieff.

SONATA FOR VIOLONCELLO SOLO in C sharp minor, Op. 134 unfinished 1952

[Соната для виолончели без сопровождения, Соч. 134 · Sonata dlya violoncheli bez soprovozhdeniya, Soch. 134]

Duration: 13'

The sonata's first movement (of four planned) was completed by Vladimir Blok in 1971. Op. 134 is customarily heard in this version which was performed for the first time by Natalia Gutman on 29 February 1972 in Moscow.

MUSICAL LETTER TO B. S. ZAKHAROV IN VIENNA

FROM S. S. PROKOFIEFF IN ST. PETERSBURG [without opus number] 1952(?)

for voice and piano

[Музыкальное письмо Б. С. Захарову от С. С. Прокофьева в Вену из Петербурга для голоса с фортепиано · Muzikalnoe pismo B. S. Zakharovu ot S. S. Prokofieva v Venu iz Peterburga dlya golosa i fortepiano]

Con fuoco

Boris Zakharov and Prokofieff were fellow students at the Petersburg Conservatoire and close friends. Between 1913 and 1915 Zakharov studied with Leopold Godovsky in Vienna – this fact may possibly be the background for the genesis of this letter. At the end of the manuscript (stored in the St. Petersburg Central Archive of Literature and Art) there is a note by the composer saying that he restored the letter by memory in 1952 – perhaps the year that this Musical Letter was set into music.

JUVENILIA

JUVENILIA [CONTINUED III]
111. Four Piano Pieces ('Reminiscences', 'Elan', 'Despair', 'Suggestion diabolique')	1908
112. Sonata for Piano No. 5	1908
113. Scene from A Feast in Time of Plague. * Opera in 1 act after Pushkin	1908
114. Sonata for Piano No. 4	1908-1909
115. Sonata for Piano No. 6	1908-1909
116. Symphony in E minor (three movements)	Summer 1909

In 1977 M. Reitikh compiled a selection of twelve pieces from the above listed juvenilia (Nos. 17, 42, 65, 73, 75, 76, 83, 86, 88, 89, 94 and 108). In its commentary Igor Nestev wrote: When Prokofieff was eleven years old, the composer Reinhold Glière (1874-1956) was invited to Sonzovka, where he taught the boy the basic principles of composition. Prokofieff started at once to compose series of simple miniatures, that he called 'songs'. After six years there were 70 little 'songs'. After being accepted into the composition class of the St. Petersburg Conservatoire in 1904 he continued to compose short pieces for piano which became progressively richer and maturer.

Manuscripts of almost all of these pieces are stored in the St. Petersburg Central Archive of Literature and Art. Pieces marked with an asterisk (*) are untraceable, they are only known by their titles. From pieces marked with two asterisks () only the opening bars survive.

No. 90, 'Song No. 6' ('March'), reappears as No. 1 ('March') in Ten Piano Pieces, Op. 12. Nos. 105 and 106, Sonatas for Piano Nos. 2, 3 and 5, were later reworked and appeared as Sonata for Piano No. 1, Op. 1, as Sonata for Piano No. 3, Op. 28 and as Sonata for Piano No. 4. Op. 28. Both pieces from No. 110 were performed for the first time on the occasion of the young composer's first public appearance in St. Petersburg on 18/31 December 1908.
